

After numerous compromises and conflict, the Constitution's final version was ratified, which lays out the nat'l govt's responsibilities, powers, etc.. These are the articles that make it up: (articles may be divided into subsections and clauses, which are not covered here)

Number	Purpose
I	There is a Congress, which is the Senate and HOR. Each house determines its operating procedure.
II	There is an executive branch headed by a President; he/she/they will be the commander of the nation's military, enforcer of laws and can suggest things to Congress.
III	There is a national court; we explicitly create the Supreme Court but Congress may create or manage other ones. All major federal court officials serve for life unless killed or impeached. The national courts settles interstate conflicts, debates over nationwide law, etc. We also pay our court officials.
IV	Each state must provide its criminal records to all other states, and if someone commits a crime in one state but runs to another, the person may be returned to the home state after capture.
V	We can add amendments through a process. There are two stages: STAGE 1: Either house can vote and if 66% of either house votes YES, further discussion may be initiated and the process may continue. STAGE 2: 75% of state legislatures must vote to ratify. If you want to undo something, it is common practice to just pass another amendment that says "Amendment XYZ is now invalid".
VI	This Constitution applies nationwide. This is because of the previous inconsistencies in law.
VII	Something about ratification I don't understand the text
